Flooding Closes Area Farm Roads

A two-inch rainfall Wednesday night and Thursday morning again flooded county creeks and Little River, as runoff water swelled the waterways until they left their banks and spread out.

Elm Creek, at its Highway 77 crossing, spread out in wide sheets with strong currents running under the bridge and bottoms along the way flooded.

The Texas Highway Department maintenance office reported roads closed, some on Thursay, some on Friday, and some that were still closed Friday.

Farm Road 1915 between Buckholts and Yarrellton was closed from Thursday until Friday from Elm Creek flooding. San Gabriel overflowed and closed FM 487 between FM 1600 and Rockdale Thursday.

Farm Road 486 between San Gabriel and Crossroads was closed for about an hour Thursday from flooding along Alligator Creek. The Little River covered FM 486 between Crossroads and Pettibone and that road was opened on Friday afternoon.

Farm Road 437 between Davilla and Val Verde opened again Friday after Donoho Creek overflowed and closed the road Thursday. Elm Creek flooded FM 2269 between Cameron and Yarrellton and that road was closed Thursday and Friday. Brushy Creek flooding caused FM 908 between Rockdale and FM 486 to be closed Thursday and it was still closed Friday.

Museum Group Names Execs

Members of the Milam County Historical Commission met Thursday and started a study of a proposed constitution, also naming an executive committee to be in charge of plans for a county museum.

Representatives of the commission hailed from Rockdale, Maysfield, Jones Prairie, Branchville, Sharp - San Gabriel area, Gause, and Cameron.

Officers and alternates were named and will serve until a new year starts in January of 1977. They are:

Miss Mary Belle Batte, chairman; Mrs. Lelia Hickman, alternate; first vice president in charge of program, Kay Green, alternate Tom Underwood; second vice president in charge of finances, Judge O. B. Harden assisted by Narvie Caperton and Dan Kubiak.

Three women will share secretary duties -- Mrs. Mildred Martin, Mrs. Helen Abel and Mrs. Rachel Graves. D. R. Dodson will be treasurer with James Petty as alternate. Ed Magre will serve as legal counsel for the group.

Discussed was the need for an advisory board, a survey director, and a plant director. The advisory board will work with the survey director for displays in the museum. Another policy to be formed is the disposition of displays that are given or loaned in the event that the museum is not successful and closes.

The group agreed that there is a need for some of the members to visit other county museums for details on formation and other items that go into making a success of the venture. Several members said they could go and will report at the next meeting which will be held Thursday, June 3 at 10 a.m.

Members voted to adopt a temporary constitution with revisions. They are to study the document and have comments ready at the next meeting.

It was agreed that the committee will operate as an arm of county government and will report to county commissioners.

The county museum will be housed in the old county jail which was inspected by a state museum consultant earlier in April with a favorable report.

The consultant said the first floor of the old jail could be used for displays with workrooms and storage on other floors. The roof on the old structure leaks and the committee agreed that this must be fixed before any other work can be started.

Decades See Increasing Executive Power

By Doris H. Kearns

Editor's Note: This is the 17th in a series of 18 articles written for the nation's Bicentennial and exploring themes of the American Issues Forum. In the last of her four articles, Prof. Kearns of Harvard University discusses some of the reforms designed to restore a better balance among the levels and branches of government and to make government more responsive to the will of the majority. However, she argues, political imbalance is merely a reflection of the economic imbalance in our society.

The twin traumas of Vietnam and Watergate dramatized for millions of Americans the increasing centralization of governmental power in the national executive that had been in process for decades. The dangers of arbitrary, centralized power had been a cause of concern since the earliest days of the Republic. The Founding Fathers had considered competition between institutions and groups, widely dispersed at the national, state, and local levels, to be the best safeguard to liberty in a world of imperfect men. Initially, therefore, they tried to insure that each institution had no greater access to the resources of power than any of its competitors.

Over time, however, as the preceeding articles have illustrated, a fundamental shift of power has led to the concentration of such resources--information, money, status, access to media and technology--at the national level, particularly in the executive branch. In the past year, as the events of Watergate and Vietnam made the public increasingly aware of this centralization of power, a new critical spirit has emerged. "Reforming the government" has rapidly become--once again--an issue of widespread public concern.

REVITALIZING CONGRESS

For many of today's reformers, the behavior of Congress has provoked anguish but also hope. A revitalized Congress is frequently described as the best way both to check the imperial Presidency and to reassert a more genuine popular voice in the making of governmental policy. Dozens of panels, commissions, and conferences are currently focused on Congress's problems and potentialities. Prompted in part by this external pressure, Congress has begun a serious self-analysis with an eye toward improving its manner of operating. Its budgetary planning, its committee system and campaign financing have all recently undergone scrutiny and change.

Historically, the national legislature's lack of a unified approach to the budgetary process, provoked partly by its fragmented committee system, has contributed to weakening Congressional influence on budget planning. But so deeply imbedded was the prevailing committee structure, which allowed dozens of individual congressional committees to set their own spending figures without regard to one another, that any real change was considered almost impossible.

Then in 1974, partly in response to the Constitutionl crisis caused by the President's impoundment of funds appropriated by Congress, the House and the Senate created budget committees empowered to establish firm spending and revenue levels for the entire Congress. In theory this was an important reform, since the power of the purse remains as pivotal to understanding the source of governmental decisions today as it always has been. Whether the new budgetary committees will in fact coordinate congressional spending plans remains to be seen.

The conference committee's traditional methods of operating have also come under the scrutiny of Congressional reformers. Coming as it does at the end of the long process of making a law, the closed conference committee was designed to bring members of the House and Senate together to

Not Yet Decided...

Hubert Humphrey has tentatively stepped aside before the Democratic National Convention for Jimmy Carter. Humphrey decided not to enter the New Jersey primary or any other prior the summer convention.

Carter has all but destroyed party opposition to a move toward first-ballot nomination except for stalwarts like Humphrey, Jackson, and perhaps Ted Kennedy slowing things next summer. The Pennsylvania Carter plurality win over Scoop Jackson beat labor and city block voting.

The big difference now is that Humphrey is acknowledging he is 65 and that Carter at 50 is a new face, almost politically insructable, which people are acknowledging in state primaries, but almost always by plurality.

Other politicos from city hall to Washington might examine the wisdom of Humphrey's interim decision. He has also said "I'll be around" if he is asked to serve.

Americans distrust presidential power, but they also distrust central power of congress. A Democratic desire to renew has accepted Carter's smile and equivocation steeped in some of religious renewal.

But the alternatives have not been strong. Humphrey at 65 is 15 years beyond his prowess as a national candidate. And that is about the size of Carter's advanrage thus far.

Scoop Jackson, the Democratic alter-ego of President Ford, is part of the fading Washington establishment, having been pulled into the incumbency from House minority leadership, but sounding less like a spokesman for big central government than any president since Eisenhower.

If Carter is nominated, if the President is nominated, we are going to see Ford renew a Harry Truman attack on a "do-nothing Democratic congress," powerless to stop Ford's dozens of vetoes.

And we are apparently going to see a dogmaless Democrat intone the platitudes of hearth and home to a people not yet decided on what they really want in a 1976 president.

Q: I'd like to throw away some of my old income tax records, but I don't know how long I'm required by law to keep them. How far back can the Internal Revenue Service check your records?

A: Usually, these records may be discarded three years from the date the return was due or filed, or two years from the day the tax was paid, whichever comes later. However, records of property transactions should be kept as long as they are useful to you in determining the value of the property. For example, you should keep all records involving the purchase of your home and any major improvements you make to your home.

Q: If I fall behind in my car payments, does the loan company have to give me any kind of notice that they are going to come pick up my car for repossession?

A: No, your loan company is not required to notify you before it takes possession of your car. The law only requires that the car be removed in a peaceful manner and without the use of force. Before your car can be sold, you must be given 10 days' notice of the time and place of the sale, and you must be advised of the amount of the cash lump sum payment necessary to retain your title and ownership, in case you wish to satisfy the creditor by paying off the balance owed on the car.

Q: My wife and I both have wills and we are not certain where to place the copies. Should a copy be kept at home as well as in a safe deposit box? Should copies be given to the executors and beneficiaries for their information?

A: When deciding how many copies of a will to execute, you should remember that all of those copies may have to be changed if you decide to revise the will. Confusion could result if you revise one copy of a will and fail to update other copies. The signed original will should be kept in a safe place, such as a safe deposit box, or a fireproof lock box at home. Executors and beneficiaries named in a will generally are advised of their responsibilities and told where the original copy of the will is located, but they are not necessarily given a copy of the will.

Q: My former wife and I are due to receive a refund on our income tax, and I'm concerned about how to handle the check when it arrives in the mail. Who will the check be sent to?

A: The Internal Revenue Service will mail your income tax refund check to the address indicated on your tax return. The refund check will be made out to both you and your former wife. However, a check made jointly payable to the husband and wife can be cashed by one spouse without the signature of the other spouse. A convenient means of assuring that there is no question concerning cashing the refund check is for both of you to take it to the bank, cash it, and divide the money before you leave the bank.

hammer out concessions and compromises which could blend differing versions of a bill into a single measure. However, this sytem often allowed conferees to produce a final bill that distorted the intents of both original measures.

In recent years Congressional reformers have introduced so-called "sunshine" resolutions requiring that conference committees open their doors to the public. Under such pressures, 12 conferences voluntarily opened their sessions to the press and the public in 1974. This year the reform took hold still further when the House and Senate voted to require open conferences unless a majority of the original committee members voted to close them for a special reason.

ELECTORAL REFORMS

The Congress in 1974 also passed, after years of wrangling, an electoral reform law that requires even more complete disclosure of sources for campaign contributions. At the same time, it limits future candidates for the House to spending $168,000, a figure raised in Senate campaigns to $300,000 for the smallest states and $3.5 million for the largest. But whether the bill can affect either the underlying links between money and politics or the dominant pattern of power within American society remains to be seen.

The difficulty with reforms such as the electoral reform law is best illustrated by the complete reversal within the past 15 years in reformers' attitudes toward the President and Congress, as well as toward centralized and local governments. In the early 1960s when John F. Kennedy's legislative program was stymied by a conservative coalition of Southeran Democrats and Republicans, reformers viewed Congress as an obstructionist ogre. The President, in turn, was seen as Prometheus bound--a hero in chains, crippled by legislative restriants at every turn in his efforts to exercise leadership.

"We have been too much entranced," one historian wrote in 1963, "by the system of checks and balances and interlocked gears of government that requires the consensus of many groups and leaders before the nation can act." The American fear of leadership must be allayed, critics argue only a decade ago; the President is not strong enough, they said, to lead the nation in the 20th century, and as a result America has fallen far behind Western Europe in modernizing its government and in providing social services to its citizens. Yet today, after a decade of disastrous Presidential actions both at home an d abroad, the legislature is the major repository of progressive hope, the brave knight setting out finally to slay the Presidential dragon.

We can see a similar reversal in attitudes toward the role of the central government. In the early 1960s, most liberals agreed that more power should be lodged at the national level. After Vietnam and the Great Society, however, "decentralization" became the rallying cry for many reformers, who argued that political life in Washington had become separate from daily life in the states and the localities.

RESTORING THE BALANCE

But the problem of restoring a more effective link between political life in the capital and the daily problems of the American people may prove more complicated than today's popular catch phrase "decentralization" might suggest. Even if it proved possible to withdraw substantial powers from the national government, only to return them to the states and cities--something far from certain at this point--this would simply transfer arbitrary power from one set of insulated leaders to another. Local and state governments themselves, after all, need significant reform.

For many Americans have come to believe that the one basic problem today is that government at all levels --national, state, and local--has become overly responsive to the will not of the majority but of the few, to those citizens with money, organization, access, and position. Underlying this inequity of resources in the political realm is an even more striking imbalance of economic resources. In 1970, the top 20% of the American people received 41.6% of the nation's income. The bottom 40% received only 17.4%. In the same year one tenth of 1% of the 1,665,000 active corporations owned 58.1% of all assets.

Of the hundreds of thousands of manufacturing corporations, the 100 largest owned nearly half of all the assets. These large corporations determine the use of 90% of the productive capacities of our nation. Only 10% of the Gross National Product passes through the political sector for public choice and decision.

In my view, unless this concentration of economic resources can be dispersed, there is little chance of breaking up political concentrations of power. Priority attention must be given, therefore, to the dispersal of economic power through vigorous enforcement of antitrust laws, redistribution of income, and reform of the tax structure. Only with tese changes can we begin slowly to recreate a competitive social context within which American democracy will once more flourish.

Neutral Sweden Keeping Eye On Military Moves

By Julian Kerr

STOCKHOLM

Reuter--Neutral Sweden, pivot of the Scandinavian strategic balance, is keeping a wary eye on military developments in northern Eueope and growing superpower interest in the region.

Both military and political analyists in the Swedish capital view with considerable concern the steady Soviet buildup on the Kola Peninsula, close to the northern borders of Finland, Sweden, and Norway.

As well as housing strong amphibious forces, the Kola-Murmansk complex is the base for most of the long-range nuclear missle submarines which form the main Soviet strike capability against the United States.

The government's defense committee warned earlier this year that the Kola buildup increased the chances of Scandinavian involvement in any future war. The all-party report also said the increased military activity there could be viewed not only as a strengthening of Soviet strategic forces, but also as a move to extend Soviet influence further west.

A few months ago General Stig Synnergren, Sweden's supreme commander, sounded a warning on the implications of declining NATO strength for strategically exposed areas of Northern Europe. He stated that not only was Warsaw Pact strength growing faster than than of the Western Alliance, but its military technology also was overtaking that of NATO.

With a relative decline in NATO strength, it was vital for Sweden to maintain the level of its own armed forces, the general said.

Nonaligned but strongly armed, Sweden is flanked to the west by NATO members Norway and Denmark and to the east by Finland, which was a mutual assistance treaty with the Soviet Union.

This situation has been accepted broadly since the NATO's formation 27 years ago, both within Scandianvia and by the major powers. But it is clear that Swedish officials are concerned that this traditional balance could be upset by such new elements as the militarization of the Kola Peninsula and Norwegian oil.

The possibility of major new oil strikes off northern Norway and in the Barents Sea further has increased Soviet sensitivity about the area and the need for Norwa y to take into account Soviet security interest in the north without infringing on its NATO responsibilities.

However, despite these new factors, Swedish officials are convinced the value of the Scandianvia status quo is apparent both to the United States and to the Soviet Union, as they see it, Sweden not only guards the back door to Norway, but is regarded by Moscow as an important buffer state protecting the Soviet flank.

Hence one major tenet of Swedish foreign policy is to maintain the coherence of the Scandianvian countries.

"There is a centrifugal force active in the Nordic area to which we much always remain alert," one foreign policy expert said. "Sweden is in the middle, with Denmark being drawn toward Germany, Finland to the east, and Norway toward the west.

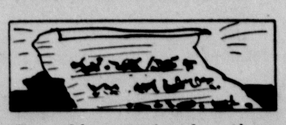
"At present, the status quo means one-third of the entire Euorpean frtontier zone between east and west is neutralized. There's nothing to be gained from changes which would upset this situation needlessly."

Last year Sweden was joined by Denmark and Norway in giving a cool reception to an article in Denmari, the Finnish Social Democratic Party newspaper, suggesting that Finland should aim at involving the Soviet Union in Scandivanain cooperation.

At the same time Sweden made it clear that the long-standing Finnish proposal for a Scandinavian nuclear-free zone guaranteed by the major powers was meaningless unless the Soviet Union was prepaed to withdraw its nuclear forces from the Kola Peninsula.

Sweden in turn ran into criticism from both Finland and the Soviet Union when it backed its attempt to sell the Viggen fighter to NATO countries by guaranteeing the supply of spare parts even in war time.

Although this caused a considerable furor in Sweden itself, officials maintained the offer merely adapted Swedish neutrality to changing conditions . The ultimate aim of keeping Sweden outside any war remained the same, they said.



The oldest national anthem is that of Japan in which the words date from the 9th century!

CWU To Celebrate Special Day

May Fellowship Day will be celebrated by Church Women United on May 7 in Cameron at The Abiding Saviour Lutheran Church with a covered dish luncheon at noon.

Along with Protestant, Catholic, and Orthodox women in 2,000 local units across the country, Church Women United in Cameron will continue the tradition established in 1933 of worshipping together on the first Friday in May to emphasize the creative and healing relations that are possible among people in every community.

In this Bicentennial Year, May Fellowship Day celebrates "Valiant Women" in the life of our nation--the memory of those who left their mark, the presence of dedicated women in our midst today, and the certainty that there will be many to follow.

The worship service dramatizes the "Valiant Women" of American history who, out of their deep religious convictions, spoke and acted on behalf of the human rights of others. Special tribute will be paid to women like Anne Hutchinson, Abigail Adams, and Sojourner Truth whose concept of justice illuminated their lives as they led movements for the abolition of slavery and equal rights for all people.

This May Fellowship Day in our community will also be an occasion for presentation of reports by valiant women of today who are meeting in Forums of Wholeness to develop a "People's Platform for a Global Society. A visiting speaker will explain.

Yoemen Bow To Wildcats In 11th

What has become a regular feature of a Yoe baseball game, was no excpetion Tuesday night when the Yoemen bowed to the Elgin Wildcats 3-2 in 11 full innings of play.

It took the extra 4 innings for a winner to be declared and in the bottom of the 11th Wildcat Perry Woods singled in the winning run to give Elgin an edge in the North zone of the district baseball race.

The Wildcats scored in the 4th inning to lead 1-0 until the Yoemen were able to notch the score 1-1 in the top of the 6th. The Yoemen took the lead in the 10th when both teams were tied at the end of the regulation play.

The Wildcats notched the score 2-2 in the bottom of the 10th and then scored the winning run with a 2 away in the bottom of the 11th.

In the bottom of the 4th inning the Wildcats scored when Oscar Rameriz singled followed by Eddie Rameriz who got to first on an error. Ed Sanchez singled and brought in O. Rameriz to take the lead 1-0.

In the top of the 6th the Yoemen tied the game up when Ronnie Orsag went to first on a passed ball followed by a sacrifice by Dennis Hollas. Donald Hanel struck out and Gerry Heitman singled Joe Smitherman went to first on an error that scored Orsag.

The Yoemen took the lead in the top of the 10th when D. Hollas singled, followed by a sacrifice by Hanel. Heitman struck out followed by a base on balls by Smitherman and Mondrik reached 1st on an error that scored Hollas.

The Wildcats came back in their half of the inning to send the contest to the 11th. A Brenhend single followed by a Wood, who was out on a fielders choice. T. Johnson struck out and Ramirez went to first on an error that also scored Behrend.

Gerry Heitman was the losing pitcher and went the distance on the mound. He gave up 3 runs on 11 hits, struck out 14, and walked 4.

The Yoemen will play Rosebud-Lott in a make up game at 3 p.m. Monday in Travis.

Federal Health Law To Limit Rural Hospital

The Administrator, Sr. Mary Jeanette, of St. Edward Hospital this date, received from the Hubbard Lake Hospital Group, Inc. and Northeast Texas Health Advisory Group a news release which brings out the fact that the St. Edward Hospital could be faced with very serious cutbacks in service even to the point of not being able to stay open due to the passage of PL-93:641, otherwise known as The Federal Health Planning and Resource Development Act of 1974.

The release reads as follows: Title: "Do You Know Public Law 93:641?"

The Federal Health Planning and Resource Development Act of 1974, Public Law, 93:641 is a fact!

The provisions in the law for establishing "primary care" (meaning simple care only) hospitals will mean the end of rural hospitals as you know them. You, the patient, are going to lose your right to choose your hospital and doctor.

1. The law proposes an experimental plan creating a two-level system of medical care. The people in the rural areas, in order to receive advanced or more sophisticated care, would have to go to the cities as the rural areas would only have "primary care" hospitals.

2. The law specifically singles out centers for such things as obstetrics (delivery of babies), pediatrics, coronary care, intensive care, etc. The development of these centers for these specialized areas will deprive the rural population of good medical care at the local level.

3. There are no medical studies showing that this two-level system of medical care will result in better care for people. Russia, according to a recent medical journal, does have a similar system that is not working for people in rural areas.

The proposed law, when it becomes fully operational, will make it very inconvenient for the people of rural areas that wish to go with sick members of their families to a medical center many miles from their home town. This will result in loss of income to families who have family members who are critically ill.

5. The people will lose their freedom of choice of hospital and physician.

6. Our nursing homes in rural areas will be unable to function properly without the nearby medical support of both physician and hospital.

7. The proposed moving of patients to centers in the large cities will reduce the income of rural hospitals. Even a 10 percent reduction in income will force the rural hospital to lay off many people. This reduction in trained personnel will cause the hospital to discontinue many of the advanced services it now offers.

8. Good doctors will not stay in an area of "primary care." They will move to where the centers are located in the cities, and the young doctors will not be attracted to the "first aid care only" atmosphere of a rural hospital practice.

9. The proposed system will not save money, which is supposed to be the purpose of the law. According to the Federal Register the average routine cost for the rural hospital in Texas is $68.00 per day compared to a large hospital in Texas which has an average routine cost of $83.00 per day.

10. The ruins of the health care system which remain for the people in rural areas will probably not even be capable of providing adequate "primary care."

Eli Ginzberg, Ph. D., professor of economics, Columbia University, feels: "The only really effective cost constraint, he believes, is to squeeze the number of hospitals in existence, and he sees the new planning law (PL-93:641) and the new reimbursement procedures under Medicare as the first real beginnings of this squeeze."

The only possible way to escape the effects of this law is to flood our representatives in Congress with our protests and ask for repeal of this law. Write to the Representatives and Senators and express your opinions. Write to your friends in rural areas of other states and ask them to protest to their Congressmen.

HARVARD UNIVERSITY

WORLD'S BIGGEST TURTLE carried this 7-foot-2-inch shell six million years ago. Harvard Professor Bryan Patterson, left, led the Venezuelan expedition that also recovered bones of 20-foot crocodiles. Arnold Lewis, right, worked six weeks restoring the shell. Dark regions are wide, flat ribs fused at white lines to form the shell. Gray plaster substitutes for missing edges, and dark lines show where scales once overlaid the shell. Expedition turtle expert Dr. Roger Wood of Stockton State College, New Jersey, named the specimen after the National Geographic.

World's Largest Turtle Shell Recoved By Team

The "world's biggest turtle"--looking like a partly buried rowboat when found--has been named in honor of the National Geographic Society.

Stupendemys geographicus was named by Dr. Roger C. Wood in recognition of support for his turtle research. The 34-year old paleontologist is on the faculty of Stockton State College in Pomona, New Jersey.

Hunting fossils in Venezuela, he recovered two specimens, one shell nearly intact and measuring 7 feet 2 inches, the second in pieces and measuring 7 feet and 6 inches. He says, "They are the biggest shells known."

The more complete shell, its few missing segments filled in with boatbulder's fiberglass, is now exhibited at the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard University.

Marine Monsters

Dr. Wood says the turtles may have measured 11 feet from nose to tail and weighed three tons when they lumbered out of the sea and died five or six million years ago. One had been turned turtle which always means helplessness and death.

"It would have taken a very large animal to have flipped over this turtle," Dr. Wood speculates, "such as a giant crocodile, 15 to 20 feet long."

Fossil crocodile remains were found near the turtle, including some some "heads the size of a big coffee table."

The discoveries were made on a frying-pan-hot abandoned oil field in Aug. 1972. Sunseared rock, cactuses, and thorn bushes gave no sign that Venezuela's Caribbean coast was only three miles away.

"Turtle beds" and "bone beds" marked on geologists' maps lured Dr. Wood and other members of the expedition of six scientists and from Stockton and from Harvard University. The expedition leader was Professor Bryan Patterson of Harvard.

The site proved to be what Dr. Wood calls "the richest deposits of their kind found anywhere in the world."

Turtle's Tombstone

A student chanced upon the partly buried shell, a tantalizing hint that the rest of an enormous carapace might still be buried.

Picks and shovels were produced and a few hours later the rowboat-size turtle shell, the largest modern man had ever seen, was carefully uncovered. The second shell was found nearby.

A few months later the excitment of the hunt had been replaced by what Dr. Wood calls the "who-done-it" phase of paleontology. Back in the lab, he gradually worked out an expert's idea of the turtles and their life.

They were probably marine turtles, he says, but unusual ones with legs and neck bones different from any other turtles, live or fossil.

The turtles probably met their end while laying eggs after crawling up on what was then a beach near where a large river filtered through a jungle. Many types of turtles and huge crocodiles frequented the area--as well as rats the size of cows.

Dr. Wood emphasized the difficulty of drawing a more detailed picture. But he said the turtle shells they found strongly suggest "an area and time that was much weirder with weirder creatures than anybody has ever believed."

Governor Calls For Motorcycle Safety

Calling special attention to motorcycle traffic accidents, Governor Dolph Briscoe said it is "high time we learn that the motorcycle and the automobile can be compatible in traffic on our streets and highways."

Said Brisoce, "Motorcycles have rapidly become a way of life in Texas as thousands of people use them for basic transportation and pleasure. Unfortunately, as the number of registered motorcycles increases, so do the number of traffic accidents."

Statistics show that approximately 270,000 motorcycles are registered in Texas and during 1975 over 200 motorcycle related fatalities were reported. An estimated 8,562 persons were injured.
